FROM THE ADMINISTRATOR

*Barney Crawford,
Executive Director*

This quarter, we get to focus on one aspect of our work that we often aren't allowed to focus on: our children. We frequently talk about the need for our work and what it takes to continue it, but we are rarely allowed to use their photos or any details of their lives. In this issue, we have received special permission to do that very thing.

During the school year, we work to keep our young people busy with school and school activities. Recently, some of our young ladies were able to travel to Texas for school activities and came back with stories and experiences that will last a lifetime.

This Summer, all of our young people will attend summer camp, and now that Summer is in full swing, our kids are busy on the playground and doing what typical kiddos do during this time of year.

Finally, we celebrate with some of our teens who have also obeyed the gospel. What a blessing it is that we can share the gospel story with these young people, and they often have open hearts to accept it. We thank you for allowing us to continue this wonderful work.

God bless,

Barney Crawford

CELEBRATING STUDENT ACHIEVEMENTS

ACADIA

Acadia was one of our young ladies who participated in Leadership Training for Christ this past March in Kansas City, MO. She and her siblings participated in Drama, Puppets, Choir, Art and Bible Quiz.

Acadia was on the Superintendent's Honor Roll and has had A's on her report cards all year long. She was the first of her class to memorize the FFA creed and recite it in front of her class, winning her an FFA Jacket. Acadia was also inducted into the National Honor Society on May 18th, 2026.

Acadia was baptized into Christ on December 21, 2025.

ALLISA

Allisa has been busy this school year with FCCLA(Family, Career & Community Leaders of America), Color Guard, Theater (Musical), FCA (Fellowship of Christian Athletes), Math Team, Jazz Band, and Choir.

Allisa was one of our young ladies who participated in Leadership Training for Christ this past March in Kansas City, MO. She and her siblings participated in Drama, Puppets, Choir, Art and Bible Quiz.

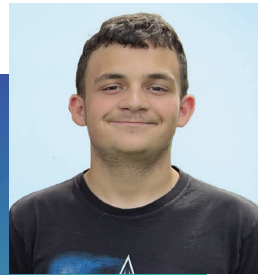

Allisa received Gold at Solo & Ensemble at Districts for her flute solo. She continued on to State competition in Columbia and received a Silver Medal for her performance. She was also awarded The Academic Award for Band because of her achievement of going to State.

On April 25th, Allisa was inducted into the International Thespian Society for participation in school plays the last 2 years. She was also inducted into the National Honor Society on the 18th of May.

During Spring Break Allisa and Sophia (another girl on campus) were able to attend a Music trip that included: Choir, Band, and Color Guard. They traveled to Dallas, TX to participate in the St Patrick's Day Parade, and had fun at Six Flags as part of their activities.

She was on the A/B honor roll all year.

Allisa was baptized into Christ on August 10, 2025.

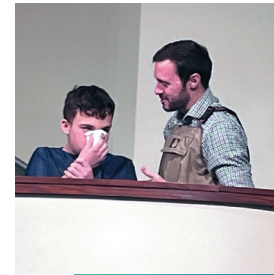

TITUS

Titus was one of our young men who participated in Leadership Training for Christ this past March in Kansas City, MO. He and his siblings participated in Drama, Puppets, Choir, Art and Bible Quiz.

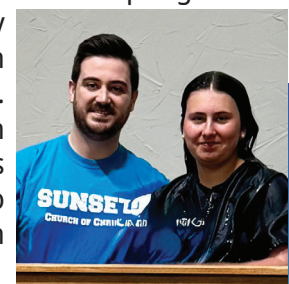

Titus was on the A/B honor roll all year.

Titus was baptized into Christ on November 30, 2025

SOPHIA

Sophia is 16 years old and recently completed her sophomore year of high school. This year, she participated in the choir and enjoyed traveling to Dallas with the choir, band, and color guard. She is a dedicated student who earned all A's and B's throughout the school year. One of the greatest blessings this past year was seeing Sophia put on Christ in baptism following the Sunset Church of Christ Ladies' Retreat last spring. At this year's retreat, she courageously read Scripture during worship in front of more than 100 women. Watching her faith grow has been such a joy, and Sophia continues to be a tremendous blessing to both our family and our church congregation.

HOW TO BE A GOOD PARENT 101! by Brian York

One Sunday morning I was heading out to visit one of the congregations that supports the children's home. I was trying to think of what would be important to write about that I need, that we all need, and that applies to the work. What came to mind was how to be a good parent. I was also thinking about what it means and how to be a good parent. Being a good parent isn't giving your kids everything that they want. A great fallacy of my generation is trying to give my children everything I never had! The truth of the matter is, my kids don't want all the things that I never had. In reality, some of those things don't even exist anymore (i.e. iPods). Truth be told, your kids probably don't even want what you have today. We get the feeling we are better parents when we give our children physical things. Being a good parent is about modeling behaviors that we want to see in our children. The following list is not comprehensive, but it is a starting point. Consider these things.

1 – PUT GOD IN THE LIVES OF YOUR CHILDREN.

Nothing else matters if your children are lost spiritually. If your children never excel physically, academically, or even socially, but they gain a reward in Heaven, then you've done your job. Take your children to worship, pray with them each night, teach them about the God of Heaven. Let them know the Father in Heaven is always there, always cares, and is always listening. The day we adopted our youngest (he was 4 at the time), we had finished court, the judge was asking if we wanted to take some photos before we left, and our little guy leaned up to the microphone and started the sweetest prayer you have ever heard. He understood that something big and wonderful had just happened and his response was: let's pray! Put God in your children's lives and the rest is just details.

2 – TAKE AN INTEREST IN YOUR CHILDREN.

I have observed parents, whose children are in the foster care system, show up for a visit and bring their children trinkets and treats, and then basically ignore the children for the entirety of the visit. While young people enjoy these things, they crave some attention from Mom and Dad and to be noticed.

If you want to be a good parent, know what your children are doing, who they are doing it with, and know what they are interested in.

3 – DISCIPLINE CONSISTENTLY, APPROPRIATELY, AND WITH MERCY.

Discipline is not effective if we do not know and understand our children. Part of parenting is encouraging proper behavior and discouraging negative behavior. Knowing we have to curb some behaviors, we need to find the right avenue in order to do so. Not every kid responds the same way to every type of correction. So we have to know our kids in that sense as well.

Your children should know what to expect. As parents, we need to outline what consequences, certain behaviors will bring about. In this way, our children know what to expect when they stray outside of those boundaries. Many years ago, I came home later than I was expected. My dad told me that if I did so again, he would take my driving privileges for 2 weeks. It wasn't long before I came home late again and my dad was standing there holding out his hand. I laid my keys in his hand and went to bed. A couple of weeks later, my keys were lying on the counter. In the interim, I had to ride to practice with my dad and ride home with my cousin after school. For 2 weeks, my freedom was in the hands of someone else. I never forgot that simple, quiet correction and I was never late for curfew again (without a really good reason).

When we, as parents, set clear boundaries and consequences and make the correction fit the behavior, we are teaching our children greater lessons than to just be home by curfew. We are teaching our children biblical principles as well.

Never forget to allow mercy towards your children. They are young, they are still learning, and they WILL make errors in judgment. Occasionally, your children don't need correction so much as they need a gentle hand on the shoulder, recognizing their error, but encouraging a change of behavior. Temper your own correction with a bit of mercy. There were plenty of times when God should have destroyed His people, but He showed them mercy, because that was what they needed at the moment.

4 – DON'T SET THE BAR TOO HIGH.

Generally, children already look up to their parents. Years ago, my son told me that he couldn't behave a certain way because, as he said, "I'm not perfect like you". He hadn't meant it to be sarcastic. He felt as if we had set the bar too high by our behaviors and our expectations, he just could not reach it. His comment really took me aback and it made me think about what example I was setting. I came to the conclusion that, there are things kids need to see. Kids do not need to see violence and they do not need to see Mom and Dad saying ugly words about or to each other. Kids do need to see you disagree at times. They need to know that you're not perfect and that your relationship has struggles and that you work through your disagreements. Additionally, they need to see you two coming back together after a disagreement and witness the forgiveness and working toward a proper conclusion, together.

4 – TEACH THEM THAT RELATIONSHIPS AREN'T DISPOSABLE

This thought goes along with not setting the bar too high. There are so many today, especially so many young people, who are looking for the perfect relationship. It is the idea that their relationship has to be the "picture-perfect", ideal relationship. The moment it doesn't fit their idea of perfect, they're ready to toss it out the window and look for another one. Being a mom, a dad, a husband, or a wife, that's not a throwaway relationship. That is a God-given, God-endorsed relationship. How to be a good parent starts with being a good role model for your children, while also letting them know your relationship with your spouse takes work, patience, and forgiveness. When we enter into the marriage bond, it is for life, which means our choice of a spouse needs to be carefully considered.

5 – TAKE A DIGITAL DETOX (EVERYONE)

Put the phone down, turn off the television, and connect with your spouse and your children. Take them outside for a walk, pull out a board game or a puzzle, or even sit down to a family meal. Until I came to the children's home, I never really understood how powerful a family meal is to children. Yes, we were guilty of turning on the TV and eating supper and not really connecting. When we got to Fair Haven, we all sat down at the dinner table and connected. We talked about our day and asked what happened at school. One of the consequences that we imposed in our home involved the dinner table. If one of our household members was not acting like part of the family, they would have to eat in the laundry room. They would eat the same meal, but they would be separated from the conversation. Even the most troubled child would change their behavior so they would not miss out on this opportunity ever again. There were no phones, no TVs, no interruptions; just a family sitting at a meal talking to each other.

6 – YOU ONLY GET 18 SUMMERS

My son-in-law and I were talking about his 4 children and I told him that he only gets 18 summers. He thought about it and he said, "you know, you're right." We often don't think about it that way, but our time with our children is limited. They will be a newborn one day and then packed for college the next. It will go fast and it will feel like it was just yesterday you brought them home from the hospital. Parents, you only get 18 summers to spend with your children and then they will be gone, living their own lives and using what you taught them over those first 18 years; make each one count.

7 – MOMMAS HOLD YOUR BABIES

Most Mothers are compelled to hold their babies. It comes naturally out of need and desire. When a newborn is crying, they are comforted by being held. What is happening is more than the outward appearance of love, but a chemical reaction in the body. When a mother holds her newborn, both the mother's and the baby's bodies release oxytocin. Oxytocin is often called the "love hormone," and its release into the body's systems at the appropriate times helps develop love, trust, and bonding. The first 3 years are crucial for this hormone release. If a child is not held very often during their early years, they will struggle for the rest of their life with all relationships, and some of them will never develop any type of meaningful relationship with anyone. Reactive Attachment Disorder (R.A.D.) is the disorder that develops from a lack of love from the mother. A child's brain literally gets wired differently than a neurotypically developed child. If a child is taken into care and given the proper love and care, early enough, they can develop some of those crucial pathways in the brain by their new caregiver. So, mommas pick up those babies and hold them when they're crying, when they need to be changed, and when they are happy too.

Parents, these are just some thoughts to get started and in no way would this cover all that would be beneficial to being a good parent. My desire is that these would be a starting point of thought. Often, the best parents are those who take the time to sit down and think about what it takes to be a good parent. Build on these ideas and feel free to forward any others thoughts you have and I may include them in a future article. brianyork@fhch.info

BIG THANKS TO DON AND MONA McFALL

We appreciate Don and Mona McFall for helping us out over the Summer. Don is our on-site counselor, and he and Mona were houseparents early in their careers. They have graciously offered to fill-in to provide relief assistance to our other houseparents. Don and Mona will be giving each set of houseparents a week off on a rotating schedule.

THANK YOU

HOUSEPARENTS NEEDED

Life seems to make changes in different folks' situations and so, we find ourselves in need of 2 new sets of houseparents. This work comes with a competitive salary, fully paid health insurance premiums, 6-bedroom home, 12-passenger van, and we are able to hire husband and wife teams. The husband is also welcome to work off-campus instead of working for Fair Haven if that situation is better for your family.

Being a houseparent can be difficult work, but it can also be just as rewarding. Many of these children just need someone to care for them, make them meals, shuttle them to and from school, pray with them, and occasionally, be a shoulder to cry on. If you think you could do this job, then you're probably right. Some of the most unlikely couples, make the greatest houseparents.

If you think maybe you'd like a job change this year, give us a call; you might be just what we're looking for, AND you might be just what these kiddos need!

THRIFT HAVEN - VOLUNTEERS NEEDED

It seems like we are always needing more help at Thrift Haven and we do! Our thrift store helps generate a lot of financial support to our bottom line and it is our volunteers who make it happen. Our wonderful helpers work to sort, price, and stock our donations and we are thankful for every moment they contribute. We have folks who volunteer several hours each week and others who only have a couple of hours each month to help. Regardless of how much time you have available, it all adds up to help keep the donations sorted, priced, and on the sales floor.

FAIR HAVEN CHILDREN'S HOME
ANNUAL BENEFIT

1 AUCTION

SEPTEMBER 19, 2026

Location:
Fair Haven Gymnasium

Time:
Doors open at 9 AM
Bidding starts at 10 AM

Let's make this one the best so far. We are already gearing up for this event and it should prove to be great one. However, our annual auction relies on you. We need some big-ticket items (cars, boats, etc.), new/nearly new small items, and antiques, to push this auction over the top.

Fair Haven uses the proceeds from our annual auction to buy propane for the coming winter. While it never fully covers our heating fuel costs, this event significantly reduces the financial burden on us.
